Grounds for Appeal: The accused student has the right to appeal the decision of the academic misconduct board on the grounds that: (please check any or all that apply)

- (a) a claim that an error in the hearing procedure substantially affected the decision;
- (b) a claim that new evidence or information material to the case was not known at the time of the hearing;
- (c) a claim that the non-academic sanction(s) imposed was not appropriate for the violation of the code for which the accused student was found responsible; and/or
- (d) a claim that the academic sanction imposed has resulted in a palpable injustice.

The Provost/Academic Vice President shall have the right to deny an appeal not brought on any of the foregoing grounds. The decision rendered by the Provost/Academic Vice President shall be final and there shall be no further right of appeal.
